ABSTRACT

Parental motivation and support for home learning programmes, coupled with parental engagement in schooling, is critical to the education of children. Hence, the investigators decided to take this study on Parents' Attitude towards Private Schools. The present study consists of parents of 200 XI standard students studying in higher secondary schools, Nagapptinam District, Tamil Nadu. The samples were selected by using simple random sampling technique. The tool used for this study is Attitude towards Private Schools Inventory, constructed and validated by Hilary N (2014). The major finding of the study shows that Parents of Higher secondary School students have favourable Attitude towards Private Schools.
